

FURTHER READING

For more information on the early development of the Network, see the following publications:

Callahan, J.T. 1984. Long-term ecological research. BioScience 34(6):363-367.

Callahan, J.T. 1991. Long-term ecological research. BioScience 34:363-367.

Franklin, J.F. 1988. Importance and justification of long-term studies in ecology. Pages 3-19 in: Likens, G.E. (ed.). Long-Term Studies in Ecology: Approaches and Alternatives. Springer-Verlag:New York.

Franklin, J.F. 1988 Past and future of ecosystem research: contributions of dedicated experimental sites. Pages 415-424 in: Swank, W.T. and D.A. Crossley (eds.). Forest Hydrology and Ecology at Coweeta. Springer-Verlag:New York.

Franklin, J.F., C. Bledsoe and J.T. Callahan. 1990. Contributions of the Long-Term Ecological Research Program. BioScience 40:509-523.

Likens, G.E. 1983. A priority for ecological research. Bulletin of the Ecological Society of America 64:234-243.

The Institute of Ecology. 1977. Experimental Ecological Reserves: A Proposed National Network. U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

Magnuson, J.J. 1990. Long-term ecological research and the invisible present. BioScience 40:495-501.

Magnuson, J.J. and C.J. Bowser. 1990. A network for long-term ecological research in the United States. Freshwater Biology 23:137-143.

National Science Foundation. 1977. Long-Term Ecological Measurements. Report of a Conference. Woods Hole, Massachusetts, USA.

National Science Foundation. 1979. A New Emphasis in Long-Term Research. Woods Hole, Massachusetts, USA.

National Science Foundation. 1980. Long-Term Ecological Research (LTER). Indianapolis, Indiana, USA.

Swanson, F.J. and J.F. Franklin. 1988. The Long-Term Ecological Research Program. EOS 69:502-508.

Swanson, F.J. and R.E. Sparks. 1990. Long-term ecological research and the invisible place. BioScience 40:502-508.